which might have given rise to apprehensions as to the intercourse (rapprochement) between our two States;—but it was found that the mutual position of good will and equity has maintained between France and England that happy accord which guarantees the repose of the world.

In the visit I have paid to the Queen of Great Britain, I wish also to testify to her the value which I attach to the intimacy that unites us, and to the reciprocal friendship of which she has given me so many proofs. I have been surrounded by distinguished men whose assistance and advice, France and to me I have gathered in the feelings which I have expressed to me fresh pledges for the long duration of that general peace which secures to our country abroad, a situation of prosperity ever increasing, and the peaceful enjoyment of its constitutional liberties.

My relations with all foreign powers continue pacific and amicable.

I, too, Brethrenmen, witnesses to the prosperous state of France; you behold our national activity, protected by new laws, displaying itself in all parts of our territory, and reaping amidst abundance the fruits of industry and improvement (développement) of the national credit, and the equilibrium established between our annual receipts and expenses, bear testimony to the happy influence of this situation over the general affairs of the state, and the welfare of the people.

The Finance laws will shortly be presented to you. Bills for the improvement of our roads, ports, and internal navigation—for the finishing of the great canals, and for the extension of public utility, will also be submitted to your deliberations.

Amidst the prosperity of the country, Heaven has blessed the interior of my family. It has secured to me numerous children, who, through marriage and happy France will be the reward of our mutual devotedness, and the honour of my reign.

"THE GREAT BRITAIN," STEAM-SHIP.

(From the Times Reporter, January 29.)

LONDON, JANUARY 28.—The "Great Britain" last being appointed for the sailing of the Great Britain from Bristol on her voyage to London, she got under way at seven o'clock; but upon the anchoring being weighed, it was found that the vessel had lost her anchor. The ship's boat, Cresno, schooner, run down about six weeks since in Kingroad, a portion of the spars and rigging of which it brought up. Some delay in consequence ensued, and she did not get away until five minutes past ten o'clock. At first the vessel was blowing fresh from the S.W., and at three o'clock a.m., on Friday, had veered to the N.W., and increased to a gale with a heavy cross sea, with squalls of rain driving fast. By eight o'clock, however, there appeared to have had a more favourable opportunity of testing her powers and capabilities than the Great Britain had during the continuance of this gale, while on her passage from Liverpool. She was now heading round the whole of which period the gale blew so strongly, and with such a heavy sea, that not a single vessel, steam or sailing, was to be seen in the Channel, all having run for shelter. At ten minutes past twelve, the wind shifted to North-East, and continued with the force of a strong gale continuing with the addition of the spring ebb, the wind being N.N.W., the ship steering W. by N., and making 5½ knots against the sea, with thirteen revolutions of her engines. From eleven till one o'clock, the weather cleared, but still very easily; and when about 15 miles below the island at 20 minutes past 12, she was struck by a tremendous sea upon the starboard bow, and at the same time being met on the beam by another equally heavy swell. The vessel was dreadful, and for a moment brought her to a stand-still. She instantly, however, "lifted" from the sea, and on examination it was found that three of her starboard bows' ball's eyes were broken off, and the iron plating of both starboard diagonal bands of the forecable deck buckled the woodwork started two inches upwards, a portion of her carved figure-head and the carpen-tary work of the stern cabin door carried away, and the iron sheathing of both starboard and star-board boards above decks ripped in two places. Notwithstanding this shock, she, how-ever, still held on her way, and at 20 minutes past 1 p.m. steaming-pointing the distant coast, she began to make headway at 45 minutes past 1 p.m. she still breached the gale, and made eight knots and a half with the engines making 13½ revolutions, and having three spencers and stay-sails set, the vessel resumed her course. When moderate, when she had four spencers and three square mainsail set, the engine making 15 revolutions, and the log giving nine knots and three-quarters, the wind being N.N.W., and the current running E. by N., at 6 minutes past 6 m. the Longships Light bore in view, and at 45 minutes past 8 p.m. it was passed, and she rounded the Land's-end. In the opinion of highly-scientific and able nautical officers present, the vessel's progress would have done more than just make head against the gale with such a sea as was running in the Channel—"The Great Western once was in a similar gale, and was off Lundy about the same hour." On Tuesday, the 27th inst., the "Queen" sighted the island for the entire of the day, while the Great Britain, at her very worst, was doing 4½ knots, and, as I have stated, succeeded in getting round the Land's-end, and, of course, safely reaching the Downs. At 10 minutes past eight the same evening. At forty minutes past ten p.m. she was off the Lizard Lights, her sails (having become useless) being furled; the engines were then making 18½ revolutions, and she cut across the gale at 10¼ knots; and at 45 minutes past 2 a.m. of Saturday she passed the Eddystone, bearing N.N.E. & E. At a quarter past 5 a.m. she was at the Start Point, making 10 knots with 15 revolutions, and rounded the point. On her voyage up the Channel at 10 to 10½ knots, and at 45 minutes past 9 a.m., when off Portland, there being a light breeze from the west-ward, she set all her fore and aft sails with her mainmast set at full, and proceeded up the Needles Channel, and passed Ly-mington at 20 minutes past 1, making 1½ knots, with 16 revolutions. When off Cowes, at a quarter past 2 p.m. she stopped for three hours to receive orders from the Admiralty on her way gallantly, and at 10 minutes past 3 p.m. she passed Her Majesty's ship Apollo at Spithead, fired a gun, and was loudly cheered by both officers and men, who crowded the topsides of the vessel, and saluted her by firing making an average speed of 12 statute miles throughout the day, and having rounded the South Foreland, came to an anchor in the Solent at 40 minutes past 1 a.m. Sunday morning. Her average rate of speed was estimated at 320 nautical, or about 350 statute miles.

Sunday, at 55 past 7, the ship again got under way, and her progress through the Downs was rapid, and she rounded the point of Dover, the wind having shifted during the night to W.N.W., it was upon her beam until she entered the Queen's Channel. At 23 minutes past 8 a.m., she was off Ramsgate, and at 45 minutes past 8 a.m. she was off Margate. At this time the wind was blowing a heavy gale right ahead; she notwithstanding made 9½ knots, with 16 revolutions, and passed the Nore at 10 minutes past 11 a.m., where she was met by the cutter of the Royal Navy, proceeding with emigrants to New York, who loudly cheered her as she passed them. At 30 minutes past 12 she came up with the Waterloo, a Hull steamer, a very fast steamer, and some gallant galley boats, which were about five miles off her in an hour and a half. The Great Britain then proceeded up the river in the teeth of the severe gale, and threaded her way through the numerous craft that lay in the river, and reached the station at 10 minutes past 1. In Gravesend she came into collision with a collier brig, which was at the time, as I was informed, dragging her anchor, and carried away her lower part, which, however, was the least of a choice of evils, as no harm was done either party. As the tide was coming down the river, or ebbed, she herself was met by the Meteor and other river vessels, who were cheered by the passengers on board of the ship, and the crews of the smaller ships in the river, as well as by the militia troops, to fall in love with them, could they have on an example more to their purpose such proceedings were looked upon by holiness? They filled the paternal breast sion VI, with the deepest sorrow. He even at his advanced age to Vienna, in order friend of religion, and none more bitterly than necessar in the chair of St. Peter, continues to explore that the venerable Pontiff expatiated and pleaded in vain. Throughout the dominion of Austria, the Pope's legate, the patriarch can hold active communion with of bishops" on any subject, or for any purpose, but by the suzerainty and license of a superior officer: they cannot meet to confer on theological questions, and to receive the mutual counsel and consolation in the care of their office—so much as a scholastic opinion cannot be broached in the colleges, without a superior officer present. The gospel itself is in fetters. The priests have no voice like the fathers of the Church and the commentators, but also to have the diplomacy of Prince Met-trich and the regulations of the police before them. Austria is to suffering for and looking for a state of ecclesiastical anarchy like the one we are not to supplicate Heaven to us against it as the worst of disasters, and if it comes it must, to meet it as Sir Thomas more would meet it, with the sword of reconquer. But as to the manner in which we resist it, such as we had a rough sketch of in the lines, and some other leading journals, ought to be treated; it may be better to adjourn the subject to that branch of the subject to another day.

The Nation has at length spoken out upon this subject, and denounces the project in good terms, at the same time suggesting that it is a project of the most unchristian and unchristian, and thus not to divert the attention of its men from the agitation of Repeal. The meaning of this hint must be perfectly obvious to every one. I am, by the way, has not yet found length to the subject. The Bishop Cantwell on the Charitable Bequests Act.

Pending the question of concordat or no concordat, it may be mentioned here that for some time past the Government have been making arrangements for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Charitable Bequests Act, and one of his parish priests, the Rev. Mr.
McGowan, on a point of church discipline, the Government have no interest save to the priests themselves. It is not necessary to observe, that Dr. Blake's conduct in the matter is severely censured by a vast number of respectable Roman Catholics, while a strong feeling of sympathy has been manifested for Mr. Keble. The Nation has on Wednesday publishes a long report of a meeting held at Anngahone Chapel on New Year's day, for the purpose of giving an opportunity to the Government to state their views on the Bishop, the respected and justly popular parish priest of Anngahone, to make good their assertion on face to face with the persecuted pastor; and, in particular, to hear how the administration of the Government will account for the fraudulent requisition which was sent to him and his allies in that neighbourhood about 1000 respectable persons were present at the meeting, many of whom were Protestants.
The Nation has also published a report of a great length into the history of his dispute with the Bishop, and in the course of his address made the following remarkable statement:
"I have justice and truth on my side, and I am glad to say that the Government are not (I pause). It is a cause worth contending for, and if I do not live to enjoy the fruits of the struggle myself, those who my fellow men deserve will be protected. We will see if all the laws, and no protection afforded to the second order of clergy. My enemies say I am deceitful, and tell my friends that if I would be so humble enough to acknowledge my guilt in all this, I should be able to account for the guilty of such baseness. I will never do what my soul abhors. I hold that I should be wrestled every again to wear my clerical gown, used for parish for that of which I knew myself to be guilty. I have been treated by my enemies as I have been treated by my enemies I seriously proclaim to be despots, in the wildest sense of the word. And now, one word more. They will give you, as they have done, that cause, and I will give you Pope will give you no redress. I tell you that in three or four months at furthest, it will be settled to your satisfaction. I have no doubt that the Government will be the of the Church—from the principles of the of the things is required in Ireland. In the this I do not mean that I wish a new order should take place for my particular cause. I wish to see the Government to wish to oppose legitimate authority. I only wish to benefit of the laws of my church—to have them administered in the same spirit of justice to all. They were framed. To all of you I say, that the Government are not to be for the many thousands received at your hands."

THE BEQUESTS ACT.

JANUARY 5.—The all but open meeting of the democratic section of the laity in the diocese of Dublin, fostered and encouraged by the speeches and writings of the "regular" clergy, is showing a decided tendency to become a general of the diocese of Archbishop Croll, and from the present aspect of affairs it will, I fear, terminate in the courage and resolution of the amiable prelate against whom this movement is directed. The Government have thus levelled, for their conscientious acceptance of a trust which none but the most devoted factious must be thoroughly convinced it will tend to strengthen, and uphold the of the Government. The Government have has been already made to the comparative destruction of the parochial churches in this and the consequent "run" on the friaries, or of the chapels where the "regulars" officiate, and the Government have been obliged to the provisions of the Bequests Act. In Dr.
Croll's diocese, however, the symptoms of displeasure have been, if possible, more unequallled. There are in the towns and environs of Dublin, a large number of churches, and the of the prime's own, both of which have, since the archbishop's acceptance of office, been entirely abandoned by their usual congregation; and so general has the feeling of distrust become, that the Government have been obliged whole burden of their religious duties has been added to the friars; in proof of which, it appears that an additional number of members of the latter order, from different parts of the diocese, have been sent to reside in the neighbourhood of Drogheda, where the disaffection has thus openly manifested itself.

As one sample, out of hundreds, of the situations which have been successfully applied to, I subjoin an extract from an harangue delivered by a "regular" priest (the Rev.
Edward McGowan), at a meeting held in Carmichael's to denounce the Bequests Act. Carmichael's is a large and ancient church, and the wily stratagems of despotic power alienate the hearts and services of that priesthood from so generous, so virtuous a people? Never. Our country shall be, on the green flag of Eri-smity is determined by the third resolution. The fourth resolution declares the beneficial effects that would follow if every Catholic becoming a commissioner, carry out the effect of the provisions of the Bequests Act. Yes, who ever becomes the votary of this detestable measure, whether he be lay or cleric, has no feeling in common with his church, but brings shame on the virtuous have united themselves with the criminal, and through their means religion has been attacked in its very sanctuary. (Hear, hear.) It may be an impropriety to mention every fact and detail of the circumstances, the lawful authorities of the Government, but I can far-readers who that resolved than conceal my sentiments, when the of my religion calls for their expression.
The Government have been obliged to the vital interests of the Irish church, have ought to be her strongest pillars have deserted her, and now clinging to the worst system of oppression the most dangerous sort of reformers, they have bent their necks under themselves, they have bent their necks under the tyrant's wrath. Step by step they will be still driven to the wall, and the Government will ought together by the cunning Ministry to bring these instruments of an impious subjugation

The missions of the above-named officers to leave on the 24th of December, 1894, are to Colombia.—We have received files of their papers from the 2nd to the 17th of August. The official members had so often left in a minority in the Legislative Council and the Council of Government, that rumours of an intended dissolution gained ground. The impracticable temper personal animosities of Sir George Gifford Mr. Wentworth appear to have had no in an exciting irritant. Sir Gordon unnecessarily appended a note respecting the right of Government to the administration of land revenue to a financial minute, for other conceivable purposes than to provoke the resignation of Sir George Gifford. motion to stop the supplies. Luckily the sense of the majority of the Council prevented neutralising the mischief these haughty, volatile, and untractable spirits might otherwise have done. The Government was characterised by independence of personal and the absence of factional banding.
Nicholson continues—and most deservedly—exercise most influence over its debates.— The Government has been endeavouring to raise the character of the Governor financier. Sir Eardley Wilmot extorted a reluctant Council vote of £138,000 for 1894 and 1895, and a days later, on the argument of the Appropriation Bill, he told that, "on going over the estimates he found he could make reductions amount of £20,000, seeing that the estimated income was £30,000, and the expenditure estimated amount was £10,000 was soon found out. Sir Eardley plays rough-farting with £20,000, while the Colony is yearly getting deeper into debt.—The Governor's speech on March 8th, his report of Good Hope present a cheering contrast of the Governors of New South Wales, Dienhen's Land, and New Zealand. One drew how the Colonial Office has continued to support him, and his efforts to rescape and Canada. From The Zulu Africaner learn that he arrived in Cape Town on the 1st Nov. In the eastern district of the colony damage had been done by heavy rains and the drought, which had caused great received, indications of the establishment regular commercial relations between that city and Western Australia. On the 10th October, the barque Enrica arrived at Port Elizabeth, laden with 8 hundred sheep, and 170 sheep. And an advertisement prime milk cows with their calves, from same quarter, by the Union, appears in the paper. These are small beginnings; but they indicate a new era of commerce expect from Western Australia.—Colonial Ga- zette, January 11.

POMARE AND HIS ISLAND.—The publication of Toulouse publishes the following account of the capture of the French ship English frigate Vergil, which arrived on the 12th of July, has brought news has produced an effect as disagreeable as ful, and which has plunged the army and a deep and gloomy shadow upon the country, the Government, disapproving the acts admiral Dupetit Thouars, refuse to ratify taking possession of Tahiti, and would thus render illegal all that has been done here by the French troops. In consequence of this annexation, although not official, the title canon Pomare has been restored to Pomare, which was suppressed since the 6th of November.
She has refused every proposal made by France to return to France, and she has protectors of France, and that she ordered the Governor to be merely Commodore of the frigate Uranie. Nevertheless that she should command the insurgent troops, and lead to any other of the the European Governments would re-established her in her rights, and that therefore there would not be any occasion to resort to fighting battles. Pomare had declined to sign the Treaty of Alliance action from the Governor, who signified to commander of the British ketch Basilek he would consider it an act of hostility to break the Treaty of Alliance, and he country. She has now been suffered to out from the Island of Borabora, where she attended to abide the result of events. She said apparently that she was certain of the approach of the French fleet. It is to be assign magnanimity or weakness that our Government has drawn back? There is one thing in mind, which is, that the English always think that their Government would not suffer from the loss of a single vessel. But we should be restored to her entire sovereignty; and that the affairs of this country it terminate disgracefully for us; and that, if we should be compelled to depart after an expenditure and enormous sum to establish ourselves here."
